Welcome to the 68th Annual Conference of the New York State Communication Association

Greetings! I wanted to take a moment to welcome you to the conference and thank some folks who were integral to making this year’s conference happen. I would first like to thank our wonderful guest speakers, Dr. Donal Carbaugh, University of Massachusetts-Amherst, Dr. Lawrence (Larry) Frey, University of Colorado at Boulder and Dr. Kathleen LeBesco, Marymount Manhattan College. Each of these talented scholars generously gave of their time and effort. They were my “dream team” of guest speakers and I’m so happy that they are here to share their ideas with us.

I want to thank the entire NYSCA Executive Board, but especially, Valerie Swarts for loading me up with all the best templates and “to do” lists to make my job more manageable. Donna Flayhan for her incredibly valued support at times when I really needed it. Chery Casey for her continued stellar work as the registration guru and maintaining constant and good communication with me, the executive board and our new and old members. Ari Kissiloff for keeping NYSCANET.ORG updated and ready for visitors. Mary Ann Allison for her great work with the top student papers selection process. Corey Liberman for selling ads during a recession. Katherine Fry for writing the checks. Lewis Freeman for suggesting the idea to work with the Media Education Foundation to do a film screening. And, Missy Alexander for keeping our traditional NYSCA Official Jam Session going!

At the College of Mount Saint Vincent (CMSV), I want to first thank my department chair, Vincent Fitzgerald, for agreeing to allow me to take on such a big venture and providing constant encouragement and support throughout the planning process. Four super students who are helping out at the conference and who assisted me with countless preconference details: Matthew Klingbeil, Susan Ranke, Jessica Mitchell and Jessica Marrero. Cortney Moriarty for her editing skills and coordinating GIFTS. Ted Kafala for helping students figure out some technical visual design problems at various points along the way. The Office of the Provost, which provided financial support for students to be able to attend the conference. And a huge thank you to Bobby Williams who helped me order conference supplies and pull together all the A/V equipment.

Lastly, I want to thank each of you for all your ideas that came to me in the form of your papers, abstracts and panel proposals. As I began to look at your work, I was incredibly energized by the scholarship and ideas I saw evidenced. It was a pleasure to put together the panels and the total conference program for you. Enjoy!

As a final note, I want to take a moment to thank my partner, Adan Yair Garcia Sanchez, who passed away suddenly at the end of the summer. He would have been so proud of the work we did for and are doing at the conference. For my part, I dedicate my efforts for this year’s conference to the memory of him. I learned so much about how and what kinds of communication matters from this gentle, sweet man. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 22

Friday, Session Block #1

3:00-4:10
Patio Room
Building Communities: The Role of Representation and Communication
This roundtable panel explores the role communication plays in impacting the development of communities both real and virtual in a society influenced by a pervasive and rapidly changing media. Each participant will discuss a specific community and address how communication impacted and/or changed its development.

Chair, Suzanne Berman, Hofstra University
Participants: Mary Ann Allison, Hofstra University
Bruce Avery, Hofstra University
Susan J. Drucker, Hofstra University
Victoria Geyer, Hofstra University
Gary Gumpert, Communication Landscapers
Matthew Matsaganis, University at Albany-SUNY

3:00-4:10
Summit 3
Current Issues in Public Relations – Students studying public relations need to not only be aware of current issues, but are often expected to be on the cutting edge of those issues, especially as these involve current and changing (digital) media. In addition, these students seek to develop their professional skills through involvement with PRSSA. This panel examines this juncture and other issues related to the studying and practicing of public relations.

Chair, Susan Jasko, California University of Pennsylvania
Participants: Andrew Woodley, California University of Pennsylvania, Publics in Flux: Media Relations in Sports
Lucie Fremeau & Nate Dixon, California University of Pennsylvania, Publics in Flux: Internal Publics and Traditional Media
Amanda Lancki & Amelia Daley, Slippery Rock University and Kelly Cressman, California University of Pennsylvania, Publics in Flux: Strategies for Creating Public Awareness
Friday, Session Block #2

4:20-5:30  Summit 2
Weather or Weather Not – Weather events are big news stories. Weather reporting is a specialized form of science reporting and television broadcasting. The weather professional community itself constitutes a significant organizational phenomenon. From forecasting to disaster communication to the unique features of the ‘weather enterprise,’ this panel will address diverse issues of broadcasting, technology and rhetoric associated with communicating weather.

Chair, Susan Jasko, California University of Pennsylvania
Participants: Gary Gumpert, Communication Landscapers & Susan J. Drucker, Hofstra University, Sturm und Drang
Bruce Avery, Hofstra University, The Broadcaster’s Perspective
Susan Jasko & Chad Kauffman, California University of Pennsylvania, The Weather Enterprise: Challenges to the Status Quo

4:20-5:30  Summit 3
Insights from Conducting a Semester-Long Undergraduate Class Research Project – Two students will present their work stemming from a semester-long research project that involved participation of the entire class in the design, implementation and data analysis of a study to gain deeper insights into the culture of their college. An open discussion with panelists and attendees will detail their process and the challenges they faced from both student and instructor perspectives. The panel will also provide attendees the opportunity to workshop their own ideas for this type of project.

Chair, Anastacia Kurylo, Marymount Manhattan College
Participants: Allison Jean Canzanella & Elizabeth A. Rocklin, Marymount Manhattan College, The Cultural Identity of a College

4:20-5:30  Summit 4
Culture as Experienced and Perceived through Music and Video

Chair, Omar Nagi, College of Mount Saint Vincent
Participants: Cynthia Wang, New York University, Negotiating the Expert: Critique and Dialogue in YouTube’s Comment Sections
F. John Rickert, New York University, Treadmills, Single Ladies, and Ukuleles: The Internet Music Video
Mahabir Samuel, College of Mount Saint Vincent, Is it “Acting White” to Become Educated? Disillusionment with American Education

5:30-6:00  Patio Room
Happy Hour-Opening Reception (Cash Bar)

Donal Carbaugh is Professor of Communication, Chair of the International Studies Council (2004-present), and past Co-Chair of the Five College Committee on Native American Indian Studies (2003-2004) at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. In 2007-2008, he was Fulbright’s Distinguished Professor and Bicentennial Chair of North American Studies at the University of Helsinki, Finland. He serves as a Charter member of a United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research Advisory Group which is focused on new ways of conducting Security Needs Assessments. He has been elected Chair of the International Communication Association’s and the National Communication Association’s Language and Social Interaction Division, and the National Communication Association’s International and Intercultural Communication Division. His general interests focus upon cultural philosophies of communication, identity, and more specifically, the ways culturally distinctive practices get woven into international and intercultural interactions. His studies focus upon Native American, popular American, Russian, and Finnish communication practices, with special attention to the relationship between language use, culture, spirit, and nature. In 1992, he was elected Visiting Senior Member at Linacre College, Oxford University, England, which is a lifetime position. He has held academic appointments at the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Helsinki, the Turku School of Economics in Finland, and at other universities in the United States, Europe, and Asia. He currently serves on about twenty editorial boards of national and international journals. His published research has appeared in many major academic journals, in several countries including Finland, Germany, Italy, and Russia, in several languages. His most recent authored book, Cultures in Conversation, was designated the Outstanding Book of the Year by the International and Intercultural Communication Division of the National Communication Association. His first book, Talking American: Cultural Discourses on DONAHUE, was identified as "a favorite book of the past 25 years" in Contemporary Sociology by former president of the American Sociological Association, William Gamson. His edited volume, Cultural Communication and Intercultural Contact, received the National Communication Association’s Award for Distinguished Scholarship in International and Intercultural Communication. His most recent edited book is Distinctive Qualities of Communication Research (with Patrice Buzzanell). His other books include Narrative and Identity: Studies in Autobiography, Self and Culture (edited with Jens Brockmeier), and Situating Selves: The Communication of Social Identity in American Scenes. Commentary on his work has appeared in The New York Times, The Washington Post, Indian Country Today, Psychology Today (several times and includes a January 2007 article about Finnishness), Vapaa Sana (North America’s largest Finnish newspaper), the Finnish American Reporter, the Moscow Times, The Times of India, and Gentleman’s Quarterly among other outlets.
Friday, Session Block #3

8:30-10:30 Media/Film Screenings

Domestic Rhythms, (Experimental Video, 6 minutes, 2009, Jeremy Newman, Producer/Director) – The mass media sells mediated personal experience, the use of high priced gadgets as the realization of the American Dream. Domestic Rhythms argues that technology changes the aesthetics of communication, adversely affecting interpersonal relationships. In this video, original digital video is intercut with animated footage from The Story of Rapunzel. Married to the prince, Rapunzel discovers their hi-tech relationship is no fairy tale.

The Codes of Gender: Identity & Performance in Popular Culture (A Media Education Foundation Film, 72 minutes, 2009) – Communication scholar, Sut Jhally, applies the late sociologist Erving Goffman’s groundbreaking analysis of advertising to the contemporary commercial landscape in this provocative new film about gender as a ritualized cultural performance. Uncovering a remarkable pattern of gender-specific poses, Jhally explores Goffman’s central claim that the way the body is displayed in advertising communicates normative ideas about masculinity and femininity. The films looks beyond advertising as a medium that simply sells products, and beyond analyses of gender that focus on biological difference or issues of surface objectification and beauty, taking us into the two-tiered terrain of identity and power relations.

10:00-11:10 Administrators Workshop – For the past number of years, the Administrators Workshop has been a Saturday morning feature at the fall meeting of NYSCA. The workshop is designed for those in the exalted or unfortunate position of President, Dean, Chair, Program Coordinator et. al. to discuss issues and problems among a group of sympathetic fellow travelers. It is an opportunity to learn and share from the experiences of others.

Past topics at the Administrators Workshop have included: tenure and promotion policies and procedures, curriculum revision, working effectively with other departments, faculty evaluations, the role of adjuncts and graduate assistants, and teaching assignments.

Chair, Gary Gumpert, Communication Landscapers

Participants:
- Maureen M. Louis, Cazenovia College
- Roxanne O’Connell, Roger Williams University
- Joseph D. Ross, St. Joseph’s College
- Thom Gencarelli, Manhattan College
- Asli Gokhan-Kucuk, Fashion Institute of Technology
- Tom Flynn, Slippery Rock University

Atlantic Journal of Communication (AJC) Matters – The Atlantic Journal of Communication is the official publication of NYSCA, and is offered as a benefit of NYSCA membership. Published under the Routledge imprint of Taylor and Francis, articles published in the AJC are accessed in databases across the world. The AJC has already established itself as a top regional title outside the ECA and other larger association titles.

The purpose of this panel is to discuss the future growth and development of the AJC, and how this fits with the goals and aspirations of NYSCA. In keeping with the conference theme, we want to explore why AJC matters to NYSCA. We also want to explore those matters which will ensure that AJC remains important and vibrant both to NYSCA and to communication scholarship in general.

1:30-2:40  Pad Computing in Education

Presenters, Ari Kissiloff, Ithaca College & Eric Machan Howd, Cornell University

This presentation will summarize the history of portable device use in the classroom and explore some of the emerging technologies that promise to revolutionize the way course content is presented to learners. Highlights will include successes, failures, e-textbooks, research websites, educational applications and current and future uses of the technology.
More Than an Instrument: Communication as a Liberal Art – In keeping with this year’s conference theme of “Communication Matters (?)” this panel explores how the diverse field of communication matters for a particular social context, namely the liberal arts college. The panel will consider some of the following questions: How do communication studies fit within contemporary liberal arts education? How might the field of communication be expanded by considering it in relation to other liberal arts? What are some ways that the study of communication can enrich undergraduate curricula in the liberal arts?

Chair, Corey Liberman, Marymount Manhattan College
Participants:
- Lewis Freeman, Fordham University, Teach Students to Communicate and You Have Educated Them for a Lifetime
- Thom Gencarelli, Manhattan College, Communication and the Liberal Arts Tradition
- Victoria Geyer, Hofstra University, An Analysis of Current Pedagogical Trends in the Curricula of Public Relations
- Mary L. Kahl, State University of New York, New Paltz, Rhetoric’s Contributions to the Liberal Arts: Education to Civic Virtue
- Pamela Zubow Poe, Manhattan College, The Case for Health Communication in the Liberal Arts Curriculum

- D.L. Stephenson, Western Connecticut State University, The Rhetoric of Mandatory Health Insurance and Its Logical Fallacies
- Mihye Seo & Matthew D. Matsaganis, University at Albany-SUNY, Investigating the Interaction of Internet Use and Interpersonal Communication to Reduce Health Disparities
Communication Matters – “For” and “In” the Moment – Communication scholars and practitioners know that one of the key theoretical approaches to understanding human communication is through rhetoric - often defined as the study and practice of persuasive communication. This panel will explore rhetoric as an invention art through the professional field lenses of journalism/public information, corporate life/IT and government administration.

Chair, Bill Karis, Clarkson University
Participants: Rich Lee, Communications Director, The Hall Institute of Public Policy – New Jersey
Larry Krieb, Vice President, Global Information Services – Estee Lauder Companies, Inc.
Mark J. Rupsis, Chief Administrative Officer, Chester County, Pennsylvania

Seeing the Sites: Visual Communication and the Web – Similar to television, the Web is a visual medium, which is influencing modern culture. This panel brings together four researchers to discuss various visual aspects of the World Wide Web.

Chair, Susan Jasko, California University of Pennsylvania
Participants: Susan B. Barnes, Rochester Institute of Technology
Roxanne O’Connell, Roger Williams University
Brian Cogan, Molloy College
Michel Scully, Roger Williams University

Identity, Social Groups and Sociological Matters

Chair, Omar Nagi, College of Mount Saint Vincent
Participants: Elizabeth Molina-Markham, University of Massachusetts – Amherst, Listening Together: The Quaker Decision-Making Process
Erica Riekert, College of Mount Saint Vincent, Are Moderates Really Moderate? The Use of Isolation and “Reason” in Articulation of Extremist Islam

Lambda Pi Eta Regional Chapter Meeting – This session will consist of reports from attending chapters, followed by a discussion of common challenges and solutions. Students will have the opportunity to network with each other and discuss planning possibilities for cross chapter collaborations.

Chair, Jon Arakaki, SUNY College at Oneonta
4:10-5:20 Are You One of Us? Issues in Conducting Research: Insider and Outsider Perspectives – This panel highlights the issues involved when a researcher is a member of the community being studied. Emic and etic perspectives are consequential for research because they impact the research process, the findings of a study, and the argument made by the researcher about the implications of these. Panelists will address the pros and cons of being an insider or outsider in the community they study. Issues raised will involve whether an outsider can ever fully understand an insider’s perspective? Whether insider’s have a unique insight as ingroup members or does group membership cloud the objectivity of the researcher? Panelists represent a variety of research areas including rhetoric, library studies, family, media and intercultural communication.

Chair, Anastacia Kurylo, Marymount Manhattan College
Participants: Janice Kelly, Molloy College
Anthony Naaeke, Marymount Manhattan College
Marie Radford, Rutgers University
Michael Grabowski, Manhattan College

4:10-5:20 Teaching General Semantics in the Basic (and Advanced) Communication Course – General semantics has long been a part of the basic communication curriculum, in large part due to its emphasis on effective communication and critical thinking, its overall pragmatic utility, its philosophical consonance with communication theory, and the ease with which it complements other topics in communication studies, such as symbolic communication, language and human behavior, logic and rhetoric, propaganda and persuasion, perception and the reception of messages, cybernetics and systems theory, and media ecology. This session will serve as an introduction to general semantics for those unfamiliar with the subject, and a refresher for those who are, with emphasis on undergraduate teaching.

Chairs, Martin Levinson, Institute of General Semantics and Lance Strate, Fordham University

4:10-5:20 Media Effects, Media Representations and Educational Programs
Chair, Omar Nagi, College of Mount Saint Vincent
Participants: Sarah Roman, College of Mount Saint Vincent, The Effects of Media on Eating Disorders

“Making Communication Matter through Communication Activism for Social Justice Scholarship”

Lawrence (Larry) Frey is a Professor in the Department of Communication at the University of Colorado at Boulder. His teaching and research focus on applied communication (communication activism for social justice, communication and community studies, and health communication), group communication, and research methods (both qualitative and quantitative). His work seeks to (a) understand how participation in collective communicative practices (especially by those who are underresourced and marginalized) makes a difference in people’s individual, relational, and collective lives; and (b) articulate and promote a perspective of communication scholarship that involves scholars intervening into discourses to promote social justice. He is the author, co-author, or editor of 15 books (including the recent 2-volume set on Communication Activism, Routledge Handbook of Applied Communication Research, The Fragile Community: Living Together with AIDS, Group Communication in Context: Studies of Bona Fide Groups, Group Communication in Context: Studies of Natural Groups, Facilitating Group Communication in Context Vols. 1 and 2), 3 special journal issues, and approximately 70 journal articles and book chapters, and he is the recipient of 14 awards for scholarship, including the 2000 Gerald M. Phillips Award for Distinguished Applied Communication Scholarship from the National Communication Association. He is a past president of the Central States Communication Association and a recipient of the Outstanding Young Teacher Award from that organization, as well as a recipient of the Master Teacher Award from the Communication and Instruction Interest Group of the Western States Communication Association.

Where Media Studies Come Alive

College of Arts and Sciences

Media Studies at Adelphi University

• Learn about both human communication (e.g., interpersonal, organizational, and public) and mass communication
• Understand how emerging technologies shape and transform everyday life

The plan of study includes 15 credits of Media Studies electives. In addition, students must complete a professional internship for 3 credits that may be pursued in an area related to the student’s career goals—from advertising and public relations to media literacy and education.

For more information, visit academics.adelphi.eduartsci/com/mediastudies.php, or contact Communications Department Chair Peter Costello at (516) 877-4912 or costello@adelphi.edu.
