Thank you, Douglas Strahler!

The New York State Communication Association is grateful for your dedication, service, and leadership as our President.
To the NYSCA Community,

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the 76th annual meeting of the New York State Communication Association. NYSCA is undoubtedly an incredible opportunity to learn, share knowledge, and foster new connections. I will forever remain grateful to my friend Cheryl Casey for encouraging me to attend. In October of 2016, when I was granted the privilege to plan this year’s conference, I was a bit overwhelmed by the possibilities. The changing political environment, a continuously growing emphasis in the field on health communication, and the speed and urgency of organizational environments influenced by technology led my focus to the notion of time as a construct, rhetorical tool, and political wedge. This notion of time seems particularly appropriate as NYSCA celebrated the 75th anniversary last year and we look ahead to the centennial.

With the notion of time and the socio-political environment as our focus, I am pleased to welcome our two keynote speakers. On Friday, Dr. Judith Yaross Lee of Ohio University will be discussing Mad as a New York phenomenon and the magazine’s significance in the counterculture and the visual turn. On Saturday, Dr. Dana Cloud of Syracuse University will be speaking about her book, Reality Bites: Rhetoric and the Circulation of Truth Claims in U.S. Political Culture with an emphasis on the limits of truth-appeals and fact checking in political discourse. I am incredibly grateful that they accepted the invitation to speak, and have been so wonderful throughout the planning process.

Some returning events include Great Ideas for Teaching Students (GIFTS), Undergraduate Poster Session, Top Paper Panel, and Undergraduate Town Hall. A special thank you to Evelyn Plummer, Ari Kissiloff, and Lewis Freeman for helping to continue these traditions. On Friday afternoon, NYSCA President Doug Strahler will host a plenary session featuring Wilson Scholars with a focus on the state of the field in turbulent times. Join us for food, drink, and laughs at the Saturday evening reception generously sponsored by Rutgers University’s Doctoral Program in Communication, Information and Library Studies and Rutgers University’s Masters Program in Communication and Information Studies. After dinner on Saturday, join us back in Marty’s Lounge for music from The Professors featuring Past Presidents Marie and Gary Radford.

As the journey of planning comes to a close, I am left with immense gratitude for the help and support of numerous folks. I would like to thank members of the Board and Past Presidents for answering my (often silly) questions and providing me with guidance throughout the planning process. Michael Plugh, Thom Gencarelli, Anastacia Kurylo, Susan Jasko, Cheryl Casey, Corey Liberman, and Lance Strate have served as a most patient advisory board throughout this process. A special thank you to my colleagues at Cazenovia College, Maureen Louis and Bruce Roig, for their daily support – I could not ask for better colleagues and friends. When you see Elizabeth Dobson around this weekend, please give her a high-five for her tremendous efforts as a student intern. This conference simply would not be possible without the dedication of Executive Secretary Noura Ahmad Hajjaj, and the leadership of President Doug Strahler. I may be listed as the planner for this conference, but this was truly a team effort.

I hope you all enjoy your time at the 76th!

Best,

On Innovation: Developing and Deploying New Approaches to Student Learning

Excellent teaching remains at the heart of the academic endeavor. Yet time compression, curricular constraints, and competing needs can limit risk taking and creativity. This panel will discuss recent experiences with innovations in student learning. Panelists will share successful strategies and reflect on factors that can make innovative risk a particular challenge.

Chair: Christine Hirsch, SUNY Oswego
Respondent: Corey J. Liberman, Marymount Manhattan College

Participants:

“Student-directed Discussion: Getting Out of the Way So Students Can Teach Each Other”
Lewis Freeman, Fordham University

“Resource Free: Evolving Pedagogy in the Face of Competing Organizational Demands”
Susan Jasko, California University of Pennsylvania

“Team Based Learning and the Creative Classroom”

Muslim Women in Media Environments

In a state of defiance against Islamophobia and terrorism, the research scholars on this panel will address a variety of issues related to depictions of Muslim women in myriad media environments. In an effort to amplify their voices, the panelists will argue representations of identity and archetypes in ISIS’s Magazine Rumiyah, scrutinize hijab and Disney princesses, highlight discursive spaces for inclusion of hijab, and analyze the phenomenon of Nike’s brand activism of pro-hijab.

Chair: Thom Gencarelli, Manhattan College

Respondent: Susan Drucker, Hofstra University

Participants:
- “ISIS’s Propaganda of Gender: The Depiction of Women in Magazine Rumiyah”
  Noura Ahmad Hajjaj, SUNY New Paltz

A New York State of Mind: Mad Magazine and the Spirit of Our Times

When Mad magazine began life in 1952 as a comic book parodying other comic books, it silently built upon a series of regional communication traditions. A comic take on the contemporary scene marked New York periodicals dating back to the 1830s, when William T. Porter’s Spirit of the Times (1831-1861) and The Knickerbocker (1833-1865) carried the regional media scene to a national audience, as did the twentieth century’s two most influential humorous magazines: the New Yorker in the aftermath of World War I and Mad in the years following World War II. Mad’s zany humor has received credit for inspiring the development of the graphic novel as well as for launching the counterculture of the Baby Boom generation, but it also deserves recognition as a downtown (and outer-borough) counterpart to the New Yorker and an avatar of postmodern rhetoric, with its penchant for parody, contrarian standpoints, and the visual turn.

Judith Yaross Lee (Ph.D., University of Chicago, 1986) is Distinguished Professor of Communication Studies and Charles E. Zumkehr Professor of Rhetoric and Public Culture in the School of Communication Studies at Ohio University’s Scripps College of Communication in Athens, OH. An interdisciplinary Americanist, she studies popular rhetorics at the intersection of media, social, political, and intellectual history. Lee is the author or editor of five books, most recently Twain’s Brand: Humor in Contemporary American Culture (2012), three journals (including Explorations in Media Ecology as founding co-editor with Lance Strate), and some five dozen essays and articles in scholarly books and journals, most recently “The Sociable Sam Clemens: Mark Twain Among Friends” (2018). She served as 2016 Fulbright Senior Professor of American Culture at Leiden University in the Netherlands, and has lectured widely in Europe and Australia as well as across the U.S. Her current projects include Seeing Mad: Essays on Mad Magazine’s Humor and Legacy from Cover to Fold-In, co-edited with John Bird of Winthrop University, and American Humor and Matters of Empire, a theoretical revision of American comic rhetoric.

Don’t Wait, Act Now! Perspectives on Responsiveness and Urgency for the Philosophy of Communication

Given that time has long been a concern of philosophy, and communication typically considers a response, the philosophy of communication is an apropos space to consider how time and responsiveness necessarily complicate each other, to discover an intimacy with urgency.
Thematically, this panel is particularly concerned with philosophical investigations into the way in which urgency dominates communicative mediums and messages, prompting unique responses in today’s fast-paced historical moment.

Chair: Bruce Roig, Cazenovia College

Participants:

“Recalling Overtime: Feeling Time at Work-Life Boundaries”
Margaret M. Mullan, East Stroudsburg University

“Bargain Shopping: The Rise of Pop-Up Marketing and the Renegotiation of Time and Space in a Hypermodern Age”

Chronemics & Contemporary Music

What does “contemporary” mean in terms of today’s music? Originality in music is certainly problematic as almost all songs are versions, commentaries, or appropriations of other tunes. Furthermore, how does the music of our time comment on our times? Three communications scholars tackle the issue of time and contemporary music.

Trump Time: Communication Lessons or Trump’s Communication Primer

From Twitter to off-the-cuff comments on the White House lawn, Trump prefers to be his own messenger. The Trump era communication strategy embraces social media and direct engagement with the public often bypassing press. Politics aside, what are the lessons we can all take from his communication playbook? Questions this roundtable will discuss include: Who speaks for the candidate? Who speaks for the president? What is the role of the White House press secretary? What have we learned about the power of narrative? What have we learned about persuasion? Public Address? Journalism? Public Relations?

NYSCA Undergraduate Town Hall Meeting

Facilitator: Lewis Freeman, Fordham University

What topics interest or concern you about your undergraduate experience? In this open town hall session, undergraduate students have an opportunity to share and discuss their experiences navigating the curricular and co-curricular aspects of their communication degree programs. Discussion topics include majors, minors, concentrations, specializations, student-teacher interaction, internships, study abroad experiences, careers, broadening course requirements to include other disciplines, and preparing for the changing communication environment of the 21st century. All undergraduate students attending the conference are invited and encouraged to join this hosted conversation. In the interest of open and unfettered discussion, only undergraduate students may attend this session.

GIFTS: Great Ideas For Teaching Students

Great Ideas For Teaching Students (GIFTS) provides an excellent opportunity for faculty members and/or graduate students to share class-tested “great ideas” with other members of the teaching community. Participants may discuss an activity, assignment, project, game, or simulation addressing a specific communication theory, concept, skill, or learning objective appropriate to the communication discipline. GIFTS presenters often provide a brief, comprehensive handout for interested attendees.

Reality Bites: The Limits of Truth Appeals and Fact-Checking in Political Discourse

Dana L. Cloud (Ph.D., 1992, University of Iowa) is Professor and Director of Graduate Studies in the Department of Communication and Rhetorical Studies at Syracuse University. Her research and teaching focus on social movements, critical theory (including Marxist, feminist, anti-racist, and queer), and critical rhetorical studies of media and politics. She is the author of the new book Reality Bites: Rhetoric and the Circulation of Truth Claims in U.S. Political Culture (Ohio State University Press, 2018), in addition to two previous books (We ARE the Union, University of Illinois, 2011; Rhetorics of Therapy, Sage, 1998). Along with numerous book chapters, her articles have appeared in such journals as Communication and Critical/Cultural Studies, Quarterly Journal of Speech, Critical Studies in Media Communication, Communication and Cultural Critique, Rhetoric Society Quarterly, and the Western Journal of Communication. She is a longtime activist and member of the International Socialist Organization.

Is the Time Right for Teaching and Learning Public Speaking Online?

Online learning (and the hybrid format) affords teachers and students freedom from time and space constraints and have proven to be valuable and even preferred modes of learning to the traditional classroom setting in many subjects and disciplines, and for many students as well. But what about public speaking? Isn’t it at its very essence supposed to be performed live, face-to-face in front of an audience? Many purists feel so, but the natural and sometimes debilitating anxiety that accompanies public speaking might be ameliorated in the online and/or hybrid setting, giving students a chance to focus on the fundamental building blocks of speech making and improving their technical literacy along the way.

Issues of Authenticity in Times of Fakery

Authenticity is associated with faithfulness to the original. Yet this is an era dominated by the proliferation of quality forgeries, undetectable replicas, facsimiles, copies and reproductions. It is a time dominated by allegations and concerns that our news is fake and sources of advertisers shadowy. Much of this is driven by changes in technologies from the affordances offered by digitalization to an over-reliance on social media, peer-to-peer sharing, news feeds automated by algorithms, and personal confirmation bias. This panel will explore the myriad critical and ethical issues associated with authenticity in this developing media environment.

“Theory vs. Practice: Bridging the Gap”

Spaghetti and Meatballs.
Salad and Ranch Dressing.
Laurel and Hardy.
Laurel and Yanni.
Pen and Paper.
Theory and Practice.

That last one is no more a polar opposite than the others, so why do we see it portrayed this way so often in academic and business circles? Often these terms are more about “things that go together” yet sometimes we see the discussion turned into an either-or, binary, take it or leave it, all or nothing, bifurcated reality when it comes to the classroom.

How many times have we heard “Professor X only teaches production” or “Dr. Y only teaches concepts”? Has this been of concern to us, or a necessary side effect of people who have different focuses, approaches, goals, and methods?

Surely in some courses, there is an emphasis on theory over practice and vice-versa. And in other courses, the content is more of a blend. Lately blends seem to have been making more inroads, but are these constructions really necessary in a modern educational context? Do theoreticians need to learn to pull up their sleeves and do actual hands-on work? Do practitioners need to learn the ins and outs and nuances of all the important foundations of thought that we expect communications students to understand? Or are we serving our students poorly to expect people to model behavior which employees in contemporary organizations are not always themselves practicing?

In a world of inter-disciplinary, inter-cultural, inter-national collaboration – is it acceptable to expect people to hyper-specialize as some in the academy do, or will higher education embrace a more generalist worldview which may provide more opportunities to not only gain the entry-level job experience that families of our students now expect, but also the ability to code-shift into different and more lucrative and fulfilling opportunities?

In this, the 77th conference of the New York State Communications Association, we examine Theory VS. Practice. How can they work together and where should they be apart? How will we navigate the age-old tension between the camps, and ensure that our graduates can both think deeply, and also deal with the practical issues that citizens of a 21st century planet must tackle to move forward together. (Submission Guidelines on Page 34)
We welcome submissions in a variety of formats including papers, panel proposals, posters, roundtables, media screenings, and other innovative proposals for thoughtful engagement. Work related to the conference theme is encouraged, as well as scholarship addressing a wide range of communication topics from a variety of theoretical and methodological approaches. Undergraduate and graduate student submissions are also welcome and completed papers will be considered for student paper awards.

Submitted papers of no more than 25 pages should be complete, and not include identifying information (author, affiliation, contact information) – identifying information will be entered by submitters into the submission program. Papers should include a running head with an abbreviated title. Student submissions should indicate “undergraduate” or “graduate,” along with an abbreviated title in the running head.

For all other presentation formats, including panel proposals, posters (undergraduate students only), and roundtables, please include the title, the lead contact or panel chair, the participants/authors, affiliations, contact information, and a description of the panel, poster, or roundtable. For each paper in a panel or roundtable proposal, please include a title, a list of authors, and abstracts of no more than 125 words for each presenter.

A statement of professional responsibility should be included on the first paper of the submission and should state the following: “In submitting the attached paper/panel proposal, poster, or roundtable, I/we agree to present at the 2019 NYSCA conference if it is accepted. I/we further recognize that all who attend and present at NYSCA’s annual meeting must register and pay the required fees.”

We have transitioned to an electronic submission system for all abstracts, proposals, and/or completed papers – the link to the EasyChair submission site will be posted to the NYSCA website (NYSCAnet.org) in January. Please read the instructions on the site prior to submitting your paper or proposal. All abstracts, proposals, and/or completed papers are due no later than midnight on July 7, 2019.

THE 20TH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE MEDIA ECOLOGY ASSOCIATION

Call for Papers

Media Ethics: Human Ecology in a Connected World

University of Toronto / St. Michael’s College June 27-30, 2019

The Media Ecology Association invites paper and panel proposals for presentation at its 20th Annual Convention, taking place on 27-30 June 2019 in Toronto. We welcome submissions that encompass the broad array of disciplines focusing on the study of media as environments, technology and techniques, modes of information, and symbolic codes of communication that constitute media ecology. We also invite submissions exploring this year’s theme “Media ethics. human ecology in a Connected World”.

In our current hyper-connected era, information and communication technologies are increasingly forming the infrastructure of a new digital human ecosystem which is larger and quicker to evolve than any prior. This continually transforming and evolving planetary habitat connects all of humanity into, what Marshall McLuhan’s prescient mind termed, a “Global Village.”

Technology and new media’s impact on this ecosystem has a profound effect on every aspect of the human ethos – self-expression, education, values, beliefs, needs, livelihood, enjoyment – and society at large. Over the past few years, these emerging technologies and unforeseen digital media practices have also given rise to ethical issues, political and societal questions of critical importance to our evolving future.

The countless unintended implications – current or potential – of today’s rapid technological developments have largely come from socio-technical systems and emerging digital, robotic, artificially intelligent, or biomedical technologies. These advances have led to an unprecedented need for new ethical perspectives and frameworks to underpin the building blocks of our new digital ecosystem.

Although we encourage submissions that touch upon, or align with, the convention theme, papers, abstracts, and panel proposal submissions from all areas of Media ecology are welcome. A maximum of two submissions per author will be accepted.

Guidelines for Submission (deadline: December 1, 2018) authors are invited to submit their paper and panel proposals by December 1, 2018 using exclusively easyChair: https://easychair.org/cfp/Mediaethics2019

Please include title of proposed paper or panel, abstract of about 500 words outlining, as relevant, how paper or panel will fit with the convention theme, five keywords, for each author their name, title, position, name affiliated institution, and a short biographical statement (40-50 words each). In addition, details for the corresponding author should be provided. All submissions will be reviewed by the Program Committee (see Convention website for details).
